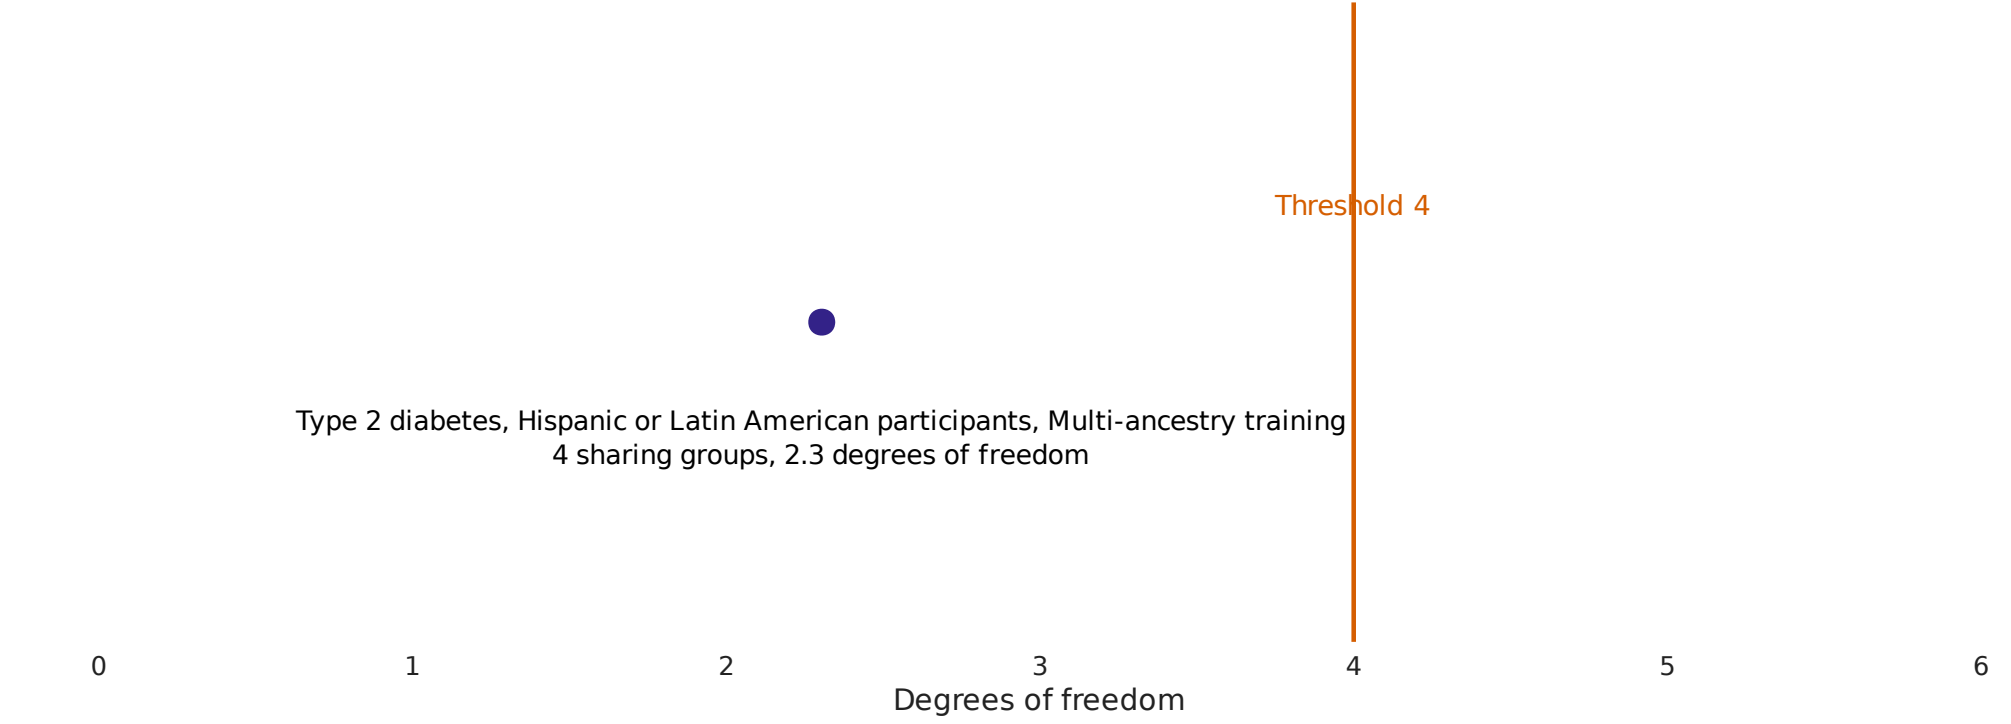
10. Why the robust interval is not the one drawn

23 of the 24 comparisons have one sharing group. The reported interval is the model interval. No comparison has degrees of freedom of at least 4.



robust is called when a comparison has two or more sharing groups. The degrees of freedom here are 2.3, below the threshold of 4, so the interval in figure 09 is the model interval.